Some of the science behind being found on search engines!

84% of internet traffic goes through search engines. Being ranked highly by search engines will expose your business to huge volumes of new potential customers...

So what are the main factors today that influence high rankings on Google & Bing?

- Well constructed, optimised, multi-device compatible website
- Consistent references (Citations) to build your credibility online
- Direct, multiple links to your website
- Coverage on online directories
- Blogs and enriched content

Industry body MOZ confirm in their latest annual survey that the most important factors to achieve good local ranking in Google and Bing are made up of on-page links, external location (Citations) and Google my business (making up no less than 68.6% of the weighting factors

How does a search results page work?

Google has rolled out recent changes to Google AdWords*

So what does that mean for businesses?

It will become increasingly more difficult to appear on page one. Potential pushing down of organic listings mean SEO Optimisation is more important that ever. Increased average cost-per-click means PPC budgets need to be spent wisely and intuitively

- Paid Advertising x 4: An effective way to get seen by potential customers in a targeted and time effective manner
- Maps: Physical search results ordered in relation to locality, relevance and prominence of you business
- Organic Results: Organic results are the results "ranked" as most relevant by the search engine, based on the specific search terms entered by the user (these are determined by SEO ranking attributed to the result)
- Paid Advertising x 3: An effective way to get a business seen by existing and potential customers in a targeted and time effective manner

^{*} Google Adwords now displays 4 ads at the top of the search results, none on the sidebar at all, and an additional 3 ads at the bottom of the search results. For regular users, the right-hand space will still be utilised for Product Listing Ads.

So, which type of coverage is right for your business?

With over 30 years of brand heritage and recognition in the marketplace. We can help you tell your potential customers about your business
